Grieving Together

A few weeks ago, David and I went out for coffee, and we happened to sit at the same table where we had sat with Bill the last time that Bill had come out for coffee with us before he died. David had lived with Bill many years and I had lived with them both and been close to them over the years. We didn't say much to each other as we sat down but I was thinking of Bill. David was thinking about Bill too, because he looked at me and said "I wonder what Bill is doing? He's probably telling jokes to all the angels!" We laughed, and David added, "I miss him." I said, "I miss him too."
